Casting a Shadow

Casting a shadow,
The new image floods its destination,
Without choice,
Controlled by time of day,
Weather, and objects in their path,
Or not.
Together they make a new,
Movable,
Fleeting,
Vision.

Which we mostly miss or ignore.

H Street

Saturday morning, the sun shines on me, H Street, Washington, DC,

As I show my best side,

Newly polished, colorful in a gray sort of way,

And the other side of me, part destruction, part repair.

Until I find myself renewed, but missing my old friends,

Who used to live in me.
